SUMMARY OF WORK EXPERIENCE

Jorn Dormans is a graduate at Vrije Universiteit Amsterdam (VU Amsterdam) who did his Master's in Social and Cultural Anthropology. His research followed the discourses and experiences of (cultural) diversity within the VU. After that he continued with a second Master through the Advanced Master Programme in International Development (AMID) at Radboud University in Nijmegen. Jorn has a passion for education and taught for several years both in primary, secondary and special education and is currently focusing on Train the Trainer Approaches in various CIS-projects. Besides strengthening educational programmes, he focusses in two multi-annual projects on the needs of Sexual and Reproductive Health and Rights (SRHR) with specific attention for refugees and host communities. At CIS his daily activities involve: project management, coordination and project reporting; acquisition and developing project proposals, planning and organising training workshops (including logistics), administration, M&E and policy development.
